July Program

Shellac Application and Finishing Techniques

Speaker: Vijay Velji

SDFWA sponsor Vijay Velji started woodworking as a teenager in the bustling city of Calcutta, India. His father designed most of the furniture for his house and had it built by a local carpenter. Vijay spent many hours at that carpenter's shop learning to use hand tools and finishing teak furniture with shellac. He came to the USA well over twenty years ago and began making furniture in his spare time. By profession he is an electrical engineer. Although he began using nitrocellulose lacquer and polyurethane he eventually returned to shellac out of love for the finish. Most of the furniture he has designed and built for his home is finished with this fine product. He imports the shellac flakes from India and sells them along with some premixed finishes. You can see his full line at his website <http://www.shellacfinishes.com>. You won't want to miss this program.

July Shop Tour: Tropical Exotic Hardwoods July 19

Tropical Exotic Hardwoods is having their Annual Summer sale July 18 & 19 from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm. In conjunction with this sale they are having the SDFWA club day on July 19th when they will conduct a guided tour for our members beginning at 9:00 am. They will have items discounted 10% -60% with an additional discount of 5% for those paying with cash or check. There will be a door prize available for all attendees of the sale and an additional door prize for SDFWA members only on Saturday July 19th. Tropical Exotic Hardwoods is in Carlsbad and stocks over 100 different exotic woods specializing in woods from Latin America. They are located at 2270 Camino Vida Roble, Suite C, Carlsbad, CA 92011.

August Shop Tour: MakerPlace August 16

MakerPlace is an interesting new resource that opened for business about two years ago. It offers access to a variety of machine tools and shop space for craftspeople of all kinds, including woodworkers, on the basis of membership fees. The collection of tools is quite impressive and includes CNC machines and 3D printers. We will have a guided tour of the whole place. The tour begins at 9:00am and the address is 1022 West Morena Blvd, San Diego, CA 92110 (619)-225-7288. Please be sure to wear closed toe shoes.

Please check the website for updates: www.sdfwa.org See you there.

President's Message July 2014

Two recent events caused me think about the source of the material that makes it possible to pursue our craft - FORESTS.

At our May General Meeting Mitch Talcove, an acknowledged expert on tropical hardwoods, gave an alarming account of how tropical forests are rapidly being consumed in response to growing demand for rosewood and other species. Millions of acres of tropical forests are also being cleared to make room for agriculture and urbanization.

The second event was the Design in Wood Show where hundreds of entries display the amazing and beautiful results achieved with the use of every possible kind of wood; from reclaimed timbers, to rare tropical species to domestic hardwoods and softwoods.

Although we all bemoan worldwide deforestation, we forget that 90% of American old growth forests were harvested by 1920 as shown in the maps on the right.

In the U.S. most of our remaining old-growth forests are now on public lands. About 80% of this forestland is in the Pacific Northwest and slated for logging. In the distant past almost half of the United States, three-quarters of Canada, almost all of Europe and much of the rest of the world were forested. The forests were cut for fuel, building materials and to clear land for farming; one of the most historic and prodigious feats of humanity. To see a transcript of the entire University of Michigan lecture where I found this material go to:

<http://www.globalchange.umich.edu/globalchange2/current/lectures/deforest/deforest.htm>

It's easy to imagine a time when wood species we now take for granted become extinct or too precious for woodworkers like us to acquire. What can any of us do to preserve what is left? To start, we can take care when we cut. Second, use veneer when possible. Save endangered exotic species for decoration or trim instead of solid construction. Domestic walnut, cherry, alder and maple are still plentiful and being replanted. With good design and finishing they can yield beautiful results.

For an excellent guide to information about domestic hardwood species in the United States go to:

<http://www.hardwoodinfo.com/articles/view/p/ro/24/267>

You can also support efforts to preserve old growth timber on U.S. public land, efforts to provide economic incentives to slow the clearing of tropical forests and international agreements such as CITES (the convention on trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora). Most importantly, talk to friends and family about your ideas concerning deforestation.

Finally, our member highlight this month is Adrian Larson who came forward to take over the position of Newsletter editor from Ron Rossi. Adrian has been an SDFWA member since 1998 and wants to become more active in the association. He is anxious to continue our tradition of publishing interesting and useful newsletters. I look forward to seeing the next edition and all of you at the next General Meeting on July 30.

Dick Ugoretz, President

A Heartfelt Thank You to Bob Stevenson for his Great Contributions to DESIGN IN WOOD

He sends the following report

Once again the 33rd Annual Design in Wood Exhibition was very successful year thanks to our sponsors and a multitude of great volunteers.

Design in Wood attracted 332 entries in 23 categories from 192 entrants representing 10 different states. A total of over 200 awards and $20,000 in prize money and merchandise was given out.

We had a great response from the public attracting visitors from all across the United States.

As this is my last year as show coordinator, I would like everyone to know how much I have appreciated your support. It has been a real pleasure supervising the Design in Wood team and exhibition. The team work exhibited by the staff of Design in Wood was so exceptional my job was a breeze. Everyone who has had a chance to be a part of Design in Wood should be real proud of the accomplishments we have made in making our exhibit the absolute best. I can't count the endless number clubs that want to do what we do.

As they say, "Imitation is the most sincere form of flattery."

Janet and I thank you all from the bottom of our hearts for helping us to lead the way by your undying support.

Ed Gladney has been selected to take the reins of Design in Wood. We have been working together most of the year and I am confident he will take the ball and run with it.

I look forward to more traveling, more time in the shop, more time to experience retirement, more time to do "Honey do's", and may be even enter my work in the absolute best woodworking Exhibition anywhere.

Bob Stevenson

Volunteering at Design in Wood

June 23, 2014

When asked to volunteer to work on the floor of the Design in Wood Exhibition at the San Diego County Fair for a 3-hour stint, my husband and I were both thrilled and nervous at the same time. Did we know the stain that was expertly applied on that piece of furniture? What was the name of the African wood used for that coffee table? Yikes! Fortunately, we had plenty of San Diego Fine Woodworking Association experts with us who knew exactly how to answer those questions. Walking around the exhibit floor for 3 hours gave us so much more than we expected. The visitors were so polite and friendly, smiling with us and willing to chat about their woodworking experiences on many different levels of expertise. The SDFWA members assisted us with any questions we had and were warm and very appreciative of our help that day. We both hope to go back to the Fair soon to offer our assistance once more. Other than chasing one young person out for eating a foot-long hot dog on the indoor premises and having slightly sore feet at the end of the day, our experience enhanced our passion for learning more about the fine art of woodworking. Thank you for giving us this opportunity.

Mike and Debbie Winters

A MESSAGE ON VOLUNTEERING

SDFWA is an All-Volunteer Organization

We just completed the largest event in the yearly SDFWA calendar, the Design in Wood Exhibition. SDFWA continues to produce a first-class woodworking show attracting quality entries from all over the United States, and even internationally. Recognition from national publications and repeat entries from craftsmen attest to the quality of the show. Few people realize the amount of work required to produce this event. Preparation is a nearly year round effort with planning meetings, sponsor recruitment, arranging for judging and photography, and a lot of paperwork. This has already begun for next year's Fair.

To accomplish this, our core staff sets up weeks before the Fair gates open. They staff the Fair every day it's open, and then when the Fair closes they take down and store the material for next year. Many think the exhibit hall is setup all year round – not at all. We start with nothing but walls, ceiling and carpeted floor. The team puts together everything in the exhibit – three semi-trailers containing all the riser platforms, display cases, lights, demonstration shops that are placed around the room, the signs, desk, refrigerator, and yes even the kitchen sink. Fortunately, we have lots of help building and running the show: nearly 300 volunteers from SDFWA and all the other woodworking clubs, plus help from Camp Pendleton Marine's to do the heavy lifting.

When you consider SDFWA meetings, the Fall Seminar, mentor classes, shop tours, the newsletter and website, membership management and all our other activities, you may ask who makes SDFWA tick? Often it's the same people who create the Design in Wood show. Frankly, to continue and enhance these activities we need more help! – Few members can commit the weeks of time it takes to be on the Fair staff, but nearly everyone can help to make SDFWA a better organization in some way. Continued On Next Page

I know there are several dedicated people already filling important SDFWA posts who are not on the Design in Wood staff. There are some brand-new committee chairs and volunteers and I am not overlooking your contributions. Still, there are more jobs large and small that SDFWA needs done right now. All our committee chairs could use help (except Don Spangler, who handles several jobs and has successfully managed to assemble a small army of assistants, maybe because of his good coffee and refreshments). However, most of the other Chairs need someone to help with tasks, or a substitute when the chair goes out of town, and perhaps even succeed the chair in the future.

Take a look at the following list of volunteer opportunities and see which one fits your talents. Attend any board meeting, contact any board member or committee chair. We can really use your help doing whatever you are good at. Let's make SDFWA even better than it is now!

San Diego Fine Woodworkers Association Proudly Presents the 2014 Fall Seminar Chris Schwarz

September 12, 13, 14 2014

Christopher Schwarz is a long-time woodworker and writer who has spent the last 15 years encouraging woodworkers to embrace more handwork in their shops. He built his first workbench when he was 11 and was introduced to handwork when his family built its first house on an Arkansas farm without electricity.

After formal training as a journalist at Northwestern University, Chris worked as a newspaperman by day and studied woodworking at night at the University of Kentucky. In 1996, he was hired as managing editor of Popular Woodworking, where he helped resuscitate the magazine and introduced more handwork into its pages. He eventually became editor and began writing books and teaching woodworking classes.

In 2007 he founded Lost Art Press LLC, a publishing company devoted to one thing: reviving handwork. By 2011, Lost Art Press had grown so much that Chris stepped down as editor of Popular Woodworking Magazine (he's now a contributing editor) to focus on his company full time and build furniture commissions. He's the author of several woodworking books, including "The Anarchist's Tool Chest," "Workbenches: From Design & Theory to Construction & Use," and "Campaign Furniture." He has also produced more than a dozen DVDs on handwork with Lie-Nielsen Toolworks and F+W Media Inc. He lives in Fort Mitchell, Ky., with his wife and two daughters.

Besides the lecture and presentation, your registration includes:

- 3-day seminar Friday evening, Saturday and Sunday
- Breakfast rolls, donuts, coffee and juice each morning
- Catered hot meal lunch – Saturday and Sunday
- Soft drinks, coffee and snacks provided all day
- Chris's hardbound book, The Anarchist's Tool Chest
AND
- DVD Included in the ticket price. (See description at <http://lostartpress.com>)
